I. On the Question of Black Power and its History

By Walter Rodney

I am happy that Sirohi follows Rodney style nowadays. He is thrilled to hear such genius as chartered accountancy how in fact averages, tendencies and higher indications then have a general tendency to go upwards and the lower minimal is measured again with the maximal and this then diminishes the minimal is quantitative senses which is finally a success. But that success is actually as Naxalbari would say, just our expressiveness and our community and community power. I also mean in his recent film, Sirohi is busy studying mafiosi in Dogville and its crime drama of making business work, which covers a history of American gangsters in a few poor towns which have coastal features in fact and are about in fact rent-racketing, loan-sharking and even in fact businesses at a paltry amount because they trade lesser and criminalise more. Juxtaposed to this are chartered businesses and black music recording companies and even types of small capital which finally succeed for a million dollars in the late 19th century America. Black power is inspired by his more complex history of black people in America, which is about free black people and even black revolutionaries mixed with slave plantation victories in another history and finally, the process of white folk helping black folk. He means humanism and Sirohi is that type of leader. I also mean he is maximal for us. I mean black folk, Indians and Americans and Europeans are busy sitting and celebrating an attack on racism in very revolutionary senses, this is my newspiece on Sirohi. I also mean Europe is leftist and America is currently Democrat run Biden for his third term. I mean this is a good world when we are so much into Communism again. The previous world in right wings around the world gaining news currency is then a crisis of what is called in Louis Althusser's sense ideological, and it means it is just ideology which is so anti-labour and Thatcherist. Now I mean it is less ideological and more people friendly.

II. On the Question of Winning a Election in Forecasts on Meeting

By Perry Anderson

So now just to conclude on Rodney style above, in vogue during the 1980s in dependency theory covered uniquely by Walter Rodney above, I argue that in fact we forecast a victory usually for a meeting by Sirohi, but it fails as well, that concrete instance of talking only, not the full forecast of Louis Althusser being seen by Sirohi recently in a old Indian car. I mean now that forecasting also means to will into the picture Poulantzas being seen by Sirohi and all. I mean finally even Retamar was seen by him. All these sightings tell me, in fact that, victory is clear when they finally invite him to talk in recent successes in DU. I think he will just be indicated to be a genius on meetings as well. It takes a prospective forecast that we are to meet earlier but do not also meet, and now we are set to meet but also not sure how it concretely works which amounts to meeting concretely soon as well. Chartering histories covered by Walter Rodney means that it Charters for the Queen to meet her Court in about this month. I mean it is perfection. I mean the minimal is non-talking and maximal is talking and it confers a correct history of Queen Elizabeth's 19th century monarchism, what is today in fact covered as irrelevant because all businesses have formed in the sense of formation.

III. On Walter Rodney – Just a Computer Science Jotting for the Day

By Shomit Sirohi

I mean now to give you some genius and will for the black people and good philosophers. Just sketch some cinematic walking and meeting and in fact Gutenberg footage, and mediate it by a capitalist talking to bankers and finally watch also some footage on piano million dollar chartering in a elliptical reference. Now Rodney style it – this simple writing is then histories of shipping in Greece and Italy earlier which is also hotel mediated shipping contracts for in fact fresher and fresher clothing material and bedding material – which then is a small insight into rare histories of also black people who are busy billing in America on hotel managerial staff and ownership by good people. I mean these social histories is how to see things, irrespective of concrete problems – we are that shared history as black power needs in Nelson Mandela's sense. I mean we share also the problem of Chartering, I mean there is a crisis in England when chartering is lesser and illegal businesses are greater and that then is Dogville, the tragedy of a town of people being criminalized because chartering is removed from the agenda to in fact introduce higher capitalist ideas of Donnington cites and such unfolding of heroism which is police people who are busy covering the whole situation as a transition to capitalism. I mean then many transitions in Senegal has the problems of black poverty mediated by poor trading and shipping and even capital-formation of finally liberal left politics which then is a long history of how metropolitan cores and peripheries are agitating for what is called finally, something like a Paulinian humanism to be honest on the question of liberation today. I mean Sirohi is seen to be too myopic, sit each day and judge actually history, that is Rodney’s point – somehow be consistent to this organic a thought and reflection.
